ADOPTIONS

The adoption of children as we know the legal process is a recent development in Western society.

Most United States laws come from English common law. One exception is the adoption law. "Blood lines" were so important to the British that it was not until the Adoption of Children Act of 1926 that adoptions were legal in England. The preference in the inheritance of an estate was a "blood line" successor-no matter how distant in relationship. In quite unusual cases where it was imperative to provide an heir, even illegitimate offspring of a family member could, through complicated steps, be made a legitimate heir.

Victorian literature abounds with romantic tales of female waifs, raised in abject misery, fancied by noble youths, and finally, triumphantly, found to be long-lost daughters of aristocracy. The great moral of each story is, obviously, blood will tell all.

In the 1850s, American states began to make legal provisions for adoptions. One of the first laws (Texas, 1850) made adoption analogous to the transfer of real property:

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Texas, That any person wishing to adopt another as his or her legal heir, may do so by filing in the office of the Clerk of the County Court in which county he or she may reside, a statement in writing, signed and duly authenticated as deeds are required to be, which statement shall recite in substance, that he or she adopts the person named therein as his or her legal heir..."

This law remained in effect until 1931 when it was modernized.

In 1851 Massachusetts enacted a law establishing judicial procedures for adoption:

"Any inhabitant of this Commonwealth may petition the judge of probate, in the county wherein he or she may reside, for leave to adopt a child not his or her own by birth.

If both or either of the parents of such child shall be living, they or the survivor of them, as the case may be, shall consent in writing to such adoption...

A child so adopted, as aforesaid, shall be deemed for the purposes of inheritance...the same to all intents and purposes as if such child had been born in lawful wedlock of such parents or parent by adoption..."

In Indiana, legislation was enacted in 1855 providing for the adoption of children. A petition could be filed in the circuit court naming the child, its age, whether it had any property, and if so, how much.

"Such court, when satisfied that it will be for the interest of such child, shall make an adoption order that such child be adopted, and from and after the adoption of such child it shall take the name in which it was adopted and be entitled to and receive all rights and interest in the estate of such adopting (parents)..."

This law continued with little modification until it was drastically amended in 1941.

It is puzzling why there was suddenly such a flurry of interest in adoption laws in the 1850s.

In reviewing the matter of adoption, the legal form with all the attendant rights of inheritance should be distinguished from a de facto adoption with its related human emotions.

This kind of nonlegal adoption has existed for many centuries in England and later in America-in the form of apprenticeship. Apprenticeship, or "binding out" as it often was called, provided no inheritance (as a rule) or perpetuation of a family name. It did offer training for the child and often gave the child a feeling of belonging to a second family. This other family in many instances became as important as the biological one. It was in this relationship that the individual gained his lifetime vocation and role in society.

This apprenticeship system was valuable for dealing with orphaned children. It gave them secure substitute families and in some measure delayed the need for legal adoption laws.

Researchers will find these records informative and much more easily located than late 19th century adoptions, which are buried somewhere in unindexed court records.

The system of apprenticeship dates back to the medieval guilds-perhaps further.

Colonial Pennsylvania adopted, with slight modification, the Elizabethan statute of 1563 concerning apprenticeship. The terms of indenture frequently were less than the seven years prescribed for all apprentices in England.

William Penn's "Frame of Government," published in 1682, provided, "All children within this province of the' age of 12 years shall be taught some useful trade or skill, to the end that none may be idle but the poor may work to live, and the rich, if they become poor may not want."

Apprenticeship was not merely a system of labor, it was a method of education--especially of the poor. Although abused at times, it trained good workmen. This custom seemed to serve well, both economic and social needs until legal adoptions came into practice in the late 19th century.

The articles of indenture were drawn with all the care of a conveyance of real estate. The master was required to provide food, clothing, shelter, care in sickness and a certain amount of schooling, usually three or four terms, and to teach the apprentice his skills. These could be blacksmithing, farming, carpentering or similar trades.

The apprentice was obligated "his said master faithfully to serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands everywhere readily to obey."

The relationship between the apprentice and his master usually was mutually helpful. He was considered a member of the family and so treated. He took an interest in the property and prosperity of his master. Few apprentices were abused, but laws were passed providing punishment for a master who ill-treated his apprentice. Further, there were severe penalties for apprentices who ran away or did not render loyal service.

At the termination of his apprenticeship, the master often fitted him out with not only the two suits of clothes stipulated in the indenture, but frequently with a horse and saddle. Quite often a daughter accompanied the lad when he left (as a bride, of course).

Nevertheless, apprenticeship carried with it some loss of social standing--"I'll bind you out!" was a common threat of an irate father to an erring son.

Pennsylvania laws were incorporated in the statutes of the Northwest Territory and later were in part a basis for the governments of Ohio and Indiana. The manner of indenturing or apprenticing followed much the same form in Indiana as it had in Pennsylvania.

An apprenticeship could come about as an only solution to a problem or in some instances as the best solution to a problem.

In Indiana prior to 1850 the care of the indigent in each township came under the overseers of the poor. From the Record of the Overseers of the Poor of Brookville Township (Franklin County, Ind.) for the year 1819:

"May the 29th 1819--this day was Sold to Artimus Moore, (he being the Lowest Bidder) Sally Spears a Pauper on the County of Franklin and in Brookville township, said Pauper was sold By Way of Public Out cry and untill the first monday in may 1820, and said Artimus Moore is to keep her the said pauper Comfortably Clothed and give her Wholesome Diet, and to Receive for his Reward Ninety three Dollars and fifty cents."

In this manner were the adult poor taken care of until the poor farms or county infirmaries came into use after the new state constitution. The youths were apprenticed.

"May 24th 1819--William and Robert H. Holland put apprentices to John Davis to Learn the fulling, Carding, Dying and Spinning Business, both put until they shall have attained the age of twenty one years, they are both to be Comfortably fed and Clothed by sd Davis and to have each twelve months Schooling, Six months of which shall be after he Who is to Receive the sam shall have become seventeen years old and when either of them shall have ariven to the age of twenty one years he shall have a New Suit of Clothes Worth forty Dollars or forty Dollars in lue thereof-Said William Holland was Born March the 23rd 1807-Said Robert Henderson Holland born October 28th 1813."

It was not until the 1850s that American states began to make legal provision for the adoption of children.

Previous to that time, any bona fide adoptions (few though they were) were matters for the state legislatures.

The true genesis of our adoption laws, whatever their exact vintage, seems to lie in an increasing concern for the welfare of neglected and dependent children, a concern that was apparent in many parts of this country. These statutes, as they evolved, radically departed from what was at first conceived as a concern for the continuity of the adopter's family. The welfare of the child became the primary concern of subsequent laws.

The "best interests" formula has consistently been honored by courts and is a uniquely American contribution to the law of adoption.

Adoptions come about from two avenues, independent placements and adoption agencies. Independent or private placement has always existed, providing a right for the birth mother to give her child to whomever she wishes. Arrangements are made by the physician, attorney or some other third party. In independent adoptions, there usually is no anonymity. Because there were many inappropriate private placements, various states set up standards and procedures to safeguard adoptive children.

The development of adoption agencies is the result of the indefatigable efforts of the Child Welfare League of America and the Children's Bureau. Both attempt to improve care and services for the nation's children, especially those that are deprived, neglected or dependent.

The most important difference between independent and agency adoptions is the relinquishment process. In independent adoptions the birth mother in some instances retains her legal rights to her child until court action. In agency placements, the mother relinquishes her child to the adoption agency before adoptive placement, surrendering all rights with the agency assuming guardianship in the interim period.

Over the years adoption officials have made every effort to erase the blemish of the past and insure equal status of adopted children with legitimate offspring. This was reflected in the "best interests" formula of the courts. Why should any person carry the lifelong burden of a birth certificate stamped "illegitimate?" Why should anyone have a father listed as "unknown?"

It naturally followed that the court record was "sealed" and the birth records was "sealed." In fact, in some cases birth records were altered and spurious birth certificates issued. It is assumed that the reason for this security is to protect the adoptee and adoptive parent from any incursion by the birth parent. It further allows the birth parent to make a new life free from the disgrace of past errors.

When many (but not all) persons learn that they are adopted, it seems to follow as night the day that they seek to learn who they are. One might suppose they would not want to contrast loving adoptive parents with unknown birth parentage. However, you cannot adopt a pedigree. A pedigree is a bloodline. Therefore, it is with a single-minded obsession some adoptees begin a search that may go on for years. Some searches uncover identities, others do not.

Research of this kind probably is the most challenging and certainly requires persistence and perseverance. Tragically, the goal often is a Pandora's box that would better be left unopened.

A score or more books has been written graphically describing these searches. "The Search for Anna Fisher by Florence Fisher" probably is the most widely known.

There is an impressive roster of organizations concerned with assisting adoptees in the search for birth parents. ALMA (Adoptees Liberty Movement Association), established by Florence Fisher, has several state units. The home office is ALMA, Box 154, Washington Bridge Station, New York, N.Y. 10033.

An Indiana organization that attempts to help adoptees seek information about their origin was formed by Martha Barrow. Information can be obtained from Search for Tomorrow, Box 441, New Haven, Ind. 46774.

ARMCHAIR GENEALOGY

A family historian living in Petersburg, Ind., or Pikeville, Ky., may be among the most ardent and enthused in the field.

His efforts at research may be limited to writing letters and queries. This can be frustrating and fruitless. He may go to his grave without every visiting any of the great record repositories in Washington, Fort Wayne or Chicago, and may never visit any of the minor ones at Frankfort, Louisville, or Evansville.

Yet in either Petersburg or Pikesville a frustrated family historian can become a successful armchair genealogist.

Membership in the National Genealogical Society is $20 annually. For this you receive the excellent quarterly, but more important, a member may borrow materials from the group's library. For an additional fee of $10, you may secure a catalogue and have the privilege of borrowing books as long as you are a member. The cost for each loan is a service fee and postage.

There is a 1971 "Library Loan Service Book List" of 245 pages and a 1975 supplement of 178 pages. There are books on heraldry, Indians, passenger lists, military, source records from all the states, family genealogies and more.

Not all books circulate because of age, fragility, rarity or size.

Random samplings of books to be loaned include:

Gwathmey's "Historical Register of Virginians in the Revolution, Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, 1775-1783."

"History of Ross and Highland Counties, Ohio (1880)"

"John Fleming: Carolina to California, Some Descendants and In-Laws, 1734-1972" by Reese.

The address NGS is 1921 Sunderland Place, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

A similar privilege is offered by the New England Historical Genealogical Society. Membership with this venerable institution is $30 and brings its quarterly, "The New England Historical and Genealogical Register," as well as the advantage of borrowing books.

Three titles or three volumes may be borrowed at a time for a charge of $3, which includes postage. You may submit titles you would like to borrow and learn if they are available. More to the point is to purchase a three-volume catalogue ($12) that lists more than 10,000 items for the New England states and New York state, which they will loan. A fourth volume is in process that lists the family histories.

The address of NEHGS is 101 Newburg, Boston, Mass., 02116.

For more than 20 years Floyd Hoenstine Box 208, Hollidaysburg, Pa., 16648, has offered a book rental service. His present catalogue of 604 pages (hardbound, $19) is not just a catalogue but a bibliographic research tool for Western Pennsylvania.

He lists 2,201 items he will loan. These include such items as:

"Biographical History of Lancaster County (1872)."

"Genealogy of the Deckard Family (1932)."

"Briar Creek Church Records," Columbia County, 1799-1881.

"Historical Register and Dictionary of the U.S. Army."

The 137 volumes of the Pennsylvania Archives.

He does not just list a title, but annotates it so there should be no doubt in your mind if this is a book you wish to borrow,

For example, "Descendants of Adam McPherson" he describes as "an account of the ancestor's arrival in America, his Revolutionary War services, residence in Lancaster, migration to Kentucky and his descendants in Ohio, Indiana, and Iowa. Also genealogy of the Steele and Wickham families."

To borrow, you pay the amount shown as the value of each book. Hoenstine will pay the postage and mail you the book, which may be kept 30 days. Upon return of the book, he will mail you 75 percent of the deposit. The McPherson book is valued at $14, so it would actually cost you $3.50, plus return postage.

This catalogue is made extremely useful with a cumulative index listing over 40,000 names with over 120,000 references.

ARCHIVES INVENTORY: Illinois

Each of the 50 states or commonwealths have a department of archives. The quality and quantity of records to be found is wide ranging. The North Carolina Archives at Raleigh and the Maryland Hall of Records at Annapolis are household words for historians and genealogists in those areas.

To make the information in these vast collections accessible many of the repositories have issued guides or finding aids. The latest of these is the "Descriptive Inventory of the Archives of the State of Illinois." It was prepared under the direction of John Daly, the State Archivist, and is a book of 708 pages with a 131 page separate index. Mr. Daly assisted in the preparation of a similar inventory for the City and County of Philadelphia in 1970.

Illinois is one of the few places with state censuses that have survived. These wonderfully enhance the decennial federal census. They are in a few instances complete for every county. In 1825, for example, returns exist for Edwards, Fulton, and Randolph Counties only. Other state schedules include 1830, 1835, 1840, 1845, 1855, and 1865. In all years only the head of the household is named. The total number of inhabitants for each age group is listed. Indexes range from none to partial.

In 1855 an unique survey was conducted concurrently. This was a census of deaf and dumb, blind and insane for each county. Entries for each individual include name, age, post office address, nature of ailment, and name of the head of family with whom residing. There is no index for this record series.

There are endless interesting records some with more or less useful content. Those with ancestors who were educators might be intrigued with the record of their certificate to teach or supervise in grade and high schools. Entries (1861-1921) include name and residence of each educator; dates of certification and duration of validity; educational deficiencies of teachers certified; and place and date of examination

One of the most substantive series in the archives collection is the "U. S. General Land Office Records for Illinois." There is no clue to the size of these holdings, but it is vast. District land offices were established at Kaskaskia, Shawneetown, Edwardsville, Vandalia, Palestine, Springfield, Quincy, Danville, Chicago, and Dixon. Most of the records generated at these offices have survived.

Researchers turn to these records with high expectations-hoping to learn the previous residence of their pioneer ancestors. For example, in the "Register. Abstract of Applications to Purchase Land..." is found the following information-date of application and/or purchase; name and residence of purchaser; amount of purchase price, and so forth. Thus, it is possible that George Musgrave, having just arrived in Illinois might give his former residence, Montgomery County, Virginia. A fact that could be worth half the tea in China.

Now for the bad news. These records are not indexed and to come by the sought after places of residence requires investigative skills of first rate quality. Now for the good news. The Illinois archives has undertaken to index these records by computer. All good genealogists genuflect toward Springfield!

Probably the most provocative records (at least for some) are the archives of the Illinois and Michigan Canal. There was a scheme to build a canal from Chicago to Ottawa in Lasalle County. It was to connect Lake Michigan with the Illinois River. Many of the laborers on the canal construction were Irish as well as other immigrants fresh from Europe.

The Illinois archives holds 89 time books which date from 1840. These are daily records of the number of hours worked by the laborers and employees of the canal. In addition to the names of the laborers the record variously lists rates of pay, monthly totals of hours worked, deductions from pay for supplies furnished and the signature of the employee.

Another series of seven volumes records the supplies charged to the laborers. These included tea, coffee, tobacco, molasses, shoes, beef, pork, and flour. Entries include name of the laborer; type and quantity of supplies; and date and place supplies were delivered. Alack and alas, neither series is indexed.

The Illinois State Archives is located in Springfield, Illinois 62756. Their telephone: (217) 782-4682.

There is little that is more useful for the family historian who does most of the research by the mails than surname exchanges. Three have recently come to hand.

ANNOUNCING PUBLICATION - "Admission Record Indianapolis Asylum For Friendless Colored Children, 1871-1900."

The Religious Society of Friends have long maintained an interest in the welfare of blacks and following the Civil War much of their work was directed to establishing schools, support of the Freedman's Bureau and like matters in the South.

In 1869 Quakers in Indianapolis saw the need for organized effort to provide care and training for the children of slaves seeking homes in northern towns. In 1870 the Indianapolis Asylum for Friendless Colored Children was organized. A building was constructed at 317 W. 21st St., and actively used until 1922.

Recently surviving records have been transferred to the Society library. Included are minutes of the board, financial records and admission records. The admission record for 1871-1900 has been transcribed by Jean Spears and edited by Dorothy Paul, both members of the Society.

Balto., 1978 (no price given)

This work, a sequel, is a list of about 16,000 marriages recorded from 1778 to 1800. Arranged alphabetically by groom's names, each entry lists the bride's name, the date, and sometimes the parents' names, and the source of the information. There is also an index of brides' names.

TOMBSTONE INSCRIPTIONS OF ORANGE COUNTY, VIRGINIA. By Margaret C.
Klein. 120 pp., indexed, wrappers,
Baltimore, 1979 $8.50

Picking her way through weeds and thickets, Dr. Klein recorded tombstone inscriptions in 150 family cemeteries, 33 church cemeteries, and some half-dozen proprietary cemeteries, resulting in the enumeration of perhaps as many as 3,000 Orange County inhabitants, giving dates of birth, death, and frequently specifying family relationships. The data includes those persons who died before 1900 and/or were born before 1850.

TOMBSTONE INSCRIPTIONS OF KING
GEORGE COUNTY, VIRGINIA. By Margaret C. Klein. 74 pp., indexed, wrappers, Baltimore, 1979
$7.50

In the manner of the publication listed above (Orange Co.) this work comprises a record of tombstone inscriptions in 80 family cemeteries, 25 church cemeteries, and several small proprietary cemeteries. Approximately 1,500 persons are listed.

The data is limited to persons who died before 1900 or were born before 1850, except for family cemeteries, where every headstone has been recorded. Contains 2 indexes: one of names of those who are mentioned in the body of the text and a shorter index of places, which points up the close links between Maryland, just across the Potomac, and King George County.

THE ANNALS AND HISTORY OF HENRICO

The history of Henrico Parish begins in 1611 and by 1634 its boundaries encompassed present-day Chesterfield and Powhatan counties on the south of the James River, and Goochland County on the north. Herein, we find the names of 10,000 persons who appear in lists of communicants, marriages, baptisms, burials, and inscriptions - marriages:
Court records-1682-1791 (incomplete);
marriages: Church registers-1815-1903; baptisms, 1815-1903; inscriptions; and communicants (post 1860).

Mrs. Foley has abstracted land records from the 14 volumes of Patent Books for the 100 year period 1632-1732. The main body of the text consists of a chronological series of abstracts, giving name of patentee, location and accreage of patent and date of settlement with copious references to family members and owners of adjoining properties and most important, the names of the settlers brought over as "headrights."
