QUARTERLY/NEWSLETTER EXTRACTIONS

Missouri State Archives

The Missouri State Archives has a new address, 620 West Main, Jefferson City, MO 65101. In addition to the archives, this is also the location of the Secretary of State, Records Management, and the Missouri State Library.

The archives has a vast collection of Missouri Military documents including 750 of the Union Soldiers and about half of Missouri's Confederate Soldier's records. Peoria Co. Gen. Society, Vol. XVIII, No. 10, May 1992.

Civil War Military Service

Civil War Military Service Records do not include regular army soldiers. The state indexes are only for volunteer troops. There are no compiled military service records for Regular Army soldiers. To locate them you must use Record Group 94 Adjutant General's Office Enlistment Papers of the U.S.

Army, 1794-1914. These are arranged alphabetically and are still in the original form at the National Archives in Washington, D.C. This series has not been microfilmed.

Once the date of enlistment is found, you can then use National Archives microfilm publications M233, Registers of Enlistments in the U.S. Army 1798-1914.

Also, the General Pension Files 1861-1934 microfilm publication T288 can be checked as this index lists soldiers who had served in either the regular or volunteer army. The Henry Co. Gen. Newsletter, Volume X, Issue 6, August, 1992.

ROCKVILLE - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, July 18, 1878.

A nice, new commodious barn has just been built for John Corlett. It has a storing capacity for 150 tons of hay. Ten horses and sixty head of cattle can also find shelter under its protecting roof. It seems to be complete in all the modern improvements. By the way John thought of having it dedicated with religious service instead of a dance, as has been done by some about here.

Mr. Wm. Warriner died last week of consumption, after a lingering illness of many months. The funeral services were held in the grove near the house. Rev. W. H. Post officiated, assisted by Rev. A. H. Needham.

Miss Rhoda Davis, of Manteno, is visiting at the M.E. parsonage.

Miss Julia A. Childs, one of our oldest residents, died on Wednesday at her house on Forked creek. She was a good mother, kind neighbor, and a faithful friend. A very large concourse of friends assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed.

The concert given by the Wilton musical union was a success in every respect. The singing of Miss Lizzie Jones in both solos and choruses was a marked feature. A telephone connecting the church and parsonage was used to the great amusement of the audience. The program was a little too long. About $30 was cleared, which is to be used on the parsonage.

The fourth quarterly meeting of the M.E. church will occur on Saturday and Sunday, July 27 and 28. The services will be held in the Lamphere school house, or in the immediate vicinity.

Mr. & Mrs. James Shreffler have left for their home in Remington, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gay have removed to Kankakee.

The rain of last week did more to level the roads than all the scrapers that have been run since spring began.

Our farmers are cutting hay and harvesting their rye and winter wheat. The oats are turning quite rapidly.

NORTON NEWS NOTES - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, September 5, 1878.

The latter part of the week has been good for threshing. Flax is yielding from 6 to 10 bushels per acre, and oats from 30 to 50 bushels.

Railroad men are very busy and crowding work. Farmers are taking hold and helping with all the force they can muster. Several parties are looking up business locations, but our town is not surveyed and platted. Hurry up gentlemen! or the track will reach us before we are ready for business. Squire Montieth will run a meat market, and will put up a building the coming week and start business at the same time to supply the hands with meats. H. Donaldson from Garner, intends to start a hardware and farming implement store. We learn Allen Bros. of Wilmington will furnish the farmers with lumber. Dr. Watson of Chebanse will locate here or in Cabery in the drug business.

Miss Julia Meeling was buried on Thursday. Disease, consumption. Several cases of diphtheria in town.

Albert Armitage came home from Nebraska to see that boy, and will return with wife and boy in about two weeks. Al. thinks that Nebraska is the right place and that if he could only induce a few young men to go there they would not come back here to live.

Quarterly meeting at Sugar Loaf next Saturday and Sunday. Elder Pierce is expected to be there.

Allen Bros. lost a wagon night before last in Wilmington. Some one stole a set of harness and hitched on to one of Allen's new wagons and putout. Wonder who furnished the horses?

A son of Theodore Smith was kicked one day this week and had his thigh broken.

MOMENCE - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, July 25, 1878.

Somebody went through Mr. Cooker's pocket book and took his last five dollars.

On Monday last about 1 o'clock p.m. Carrie Stanton, who was living at Fred Knighthart's, received a severe sunstroke. She remained insensible until 4 o'clock. She was under the shade of a tree at work at the time, but the heat was too much for her even there.

The Storm

The Storm of Friday evening, July 12, was much more severe in Momence and vicinity than at Kankakee.

The barn of John Peter Johnson in Yellowhead was struck with lightning and consumed. His horses were in the pasture and he got out in safety most of the valuables in the barn. The barn was a small one and partly insured.

The lightning also struck the barn of H. H. Line in Momence and killed two work and two young horses that were in the barn, and the barn was burned. Line was about four rods distant, and was seriously stunned. This was very hard on Line. He had taken the pledge and was doing his best to live a sober and industrious life. The killing of his horses left him in very great straits. A subscription was circulated and liberally signed to help him get a new team.

The wind leveled Dick Templeton's barn and totally demolished his wind mill, damaging him to the amount of $150 or $200.

The hawse in which Benj. Slater lives, owned by W. C. McElwain, was racked a good deal, the chimney blown down, a couple of the rafters broken and the inside deluged with water.

John Paradis' barn was also struck but not much injured.

(From the Grant Park News)

Wm. Maas had a cow struck by lightning and killed. The lightning entered Wm. Meyers' barn in Sumner, killing four of his work horses. and damaging his barn to the amount of $25 or $30. Fred Hewsing and Carl Zimmerman's corn cribs were blown off, and oats badly lodged. Mr. Wm. Keeney and Dr. G. B. Hewett, each had a horse sunstruck last Wednesday afternoon.

From the Reporter's account of the drowning of Laura Myrick and Agnes Black we take the following:

On the last fourth day of July, Laura Frances Myrick, aged fourteen years, a daughter of Ulysses Myrick of Crete, came from her home in Crete to make a visit and spend her summer vacation at Cook Gambles on Mr. Singleton's place, just over the state line in Indiana, on the north side of the Kankakee river.

Mrs. Cook Gamble is a daughter of Mr. Myrick.

Laura was to return on the 12th day of July, and did return that day, but in a manner very different from what was anticipated by any one.

On the 11th day of July (last Thursday), Laura, with a little daughter of Irvin Hewes, who was also stopping at Mr. Gamble's and two daughters of Thomas Black, one of eighteen and the other, Agnes, aged thirteen, took their dinners, fishing tackle and books, and went to Indian Town on the river, a distance of a mile and a half, to spend the day and have a sort of a picnic. Mr. & Mrs. Gamble were very much opposed to their going at all, and particularly cautioned them not to go into the water.

About 1 o'clock word came that Laura and Agnes were both drowned. Mr. Gamble and Mr. Black, who both live in the same enclosure, and a Mr. Stowel who lives close by, at once went to the river where the girls were. There, a few rods below the ford, they found the bodies, one in about seven feet and the other in ten feet of water. Mr. Stowel being the only swimmer among them. dove for the bodies and brought them to the shore, and they were at once taken to Mr. Gamble's and duly laid out, and about midnight were packed in ice that had been procured from Momence.

GENERAL HISTORY

CHAPTER I.

Typography—Six Hundred Forty-three Square Miles—Soil and Climate—Waterways—Kankakee and Iroquois Rivers and Their Tributaries—Minerals—Timber—Eight Steam and One Electric Interurban Railroad.

With the exception of two congressional townships missing from the extreme northwest corner, Kankakee county is in the form of a parallelogram, extending about thirty-six miles east and west, and about twenty-four miles north and south. Its total area is about six hundred and forty-three square miles. Of the seventeen townships within its borders, five of them, Sumner, Rockville, Manteno, Essex and Salina have limits corresponding to the boundaries of congressional districts.

Each congressional township is six miles square and is divided into sections numbered from one to thirty-six, the latter being in the southeast corner of the township. The different surveys have produced fractional townships, the irregularities generally existing on the north and west sides.

A considerable portion of the land in Kankakee county was at one time included in the general classification of "Swamp Land," and its redemption forms the most convincing proof of the genius and resource and inexhaustible patience of its people. Not only remarkable fertility, but law and order have followed in the wake of this undertaking, for prior to, and for some years after the organization of the county, the swamp lands in its eastern part ad joining those of Western Indiana, were the rendezvous of counterfeiters, horse thieves and criminals in general, who remained practically unmolested in their stronghold until the drainage of the swamps made an organized community possible.

SOIL AND CLIMATE.

From a point within, a few miles of the eastern to the western line, the county is under laid with limestone, which formation varies from a few feet to from forty to sixty feet below the surface. Kankakee county land may be roughly classified as to surface soil into three groups: sand and marsh land, light black soil, and a heavy back loam, the land increasing in value in the order of mention. The sand land is always found in low ridges, covered with a growth of different varieties of oak, the ridges separated from each other by stretches of heavy black muck. Sand land exists principally in Pembroke township, in the southeastern part of the county, but there also is a strip of this character from four to six miles wide extending from the western border to a point a little west of the city of Kankakee. With the exception of the sand land, and a few spots near the river where the limestone formation is near the surface, the soil of Kankakee county ranks with the most productive in the state, as shown by its uniformly high prices of from $125.00 to $175.00 per acre. In it are raised all those products common to the North Temperate zone, and which admittedly are the most substantial and life giving of any which come from the soil. The amount of rainfall is fully one-half less than in the southern part of the state, and the average difference in temperature is about 10 degrees Fahrenheit.

WATERWAYS.

The county is drained by the Kankakee river and its numerous tributaries. This beautiful stream, which was the pride of the Pottawatomies and the salvation of the early settlers, performs as noble a mission today as when the whisperings of the great spirit brooded over its waters. Its source is in the marshes of Northwestern Indiana, and it enters the county about midway of its eastern line, flowing in an irregular southwesterly direction to a point near Aroma, half way between the eastern and western boundaries, and about four miles from the southern line. Here it is augmented by the Iroquois, a muddy stream also having its rise in the marshes of the Hoosier state, and with it takes its way north and west to the extreme southwestern corner of Rockville township, where it transfers its beneficence to Will county, and later joins the Illinois on its way to the Mississippi. From the Indiana to the Rockville township line the Kankakee, like all elements of splendid usefulness, draws to itself innumerable recruits, rivulets, creeks and runs adding their strength and encouragement, until the whole organized force becomes as satisfying and grateful waterway, and a natural outlet for the drainage of the fertile prairie lands. In common with the rest of the state, a remarkable feature of the county is the almost entire absence of natural lakes and ponds. However, on the south side of the river towards the southern boundary, artesian water is found at a fair average depth.

MINERALS.

The mineral productions of the county are not unimportant. Potter's clay exists in many sections, and a valuable strata of the clay is found at Kankakee city, Grant Park and St. Anne, resulting in extensive tile and brick manufactories at these centers. The manufacture of lime forms a considerable source of revenue and the deposits of limestone are increasingly used for ballast and macadamizing. Kankakee stone has long had a wide reputation. It abounds in large quantities at Kankakee city, and is used in many of the public and private buildings throughout this and adjoining counties. The coal fields in the western portion of the county are destined to become more and more important as their resources are developed and their present value even cannot be over-estimated. They are being steadily and easily worked and are very productive.

TIMBER.

In the early clays the preponderating resource of the county was its timber, and while the miles of wooded lands skirting the rivers and streams in large measure have been denuded, there still remains large tracts of oak, elm, ash, hickory, walnut, maple and other hard woods, with an occasional group of pine and cedar, along the rocky banks of the river. Few states in the union have a greater variety of timber than Illinois, and of all its counties, none have been more richly endowed than Kankakee.

RAILROADS.

The pony of the Indian and prairie schooner of the pioneer have been supplanted by the eight steam and one electric railroad which traverse the county. Those operated by steam include the Illinois Central and its branch, the Kankakee & Southwestern; the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Kankakee & Seneca, both operated by the Big Four; The Indiana, Illinois & Iowa; the Chicago Southern, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Wabash, and the Illinois, Iowa & Minnesota. The electric line, connecting Kankakee and Chicago, is being constructed by the Chicago Southern Traction Company. Another electric line, the Kankakee Riverview Interurban, which is projected to run from Kankakee to Momence and St Anne by way of Waldron, is said to have been successfully financed and will be built in the spring of 1906.

CHAPTER II.

Discovery of the Kankakee by Cavalier De La Salle—The Pottawatomies, the Original Inhabitants—History of Noted Indian Chiefs.

"A little over two hundred years ago, that intrepid explorer of the Wilderness, as the Western continent then was, the Cavalier De La Salle, with the purpose of discovering the outlet of the great Mississippi, organized an expedition to come by way of the lakes from Fort Niagara as far as water passage could be found, thence to proceed overland until the river was reached. With great labor and at much expense he constructed a ship, called the Griffin, for that purpose, and in the latter part of 1679 set sail for Green Bay. Thirty sturdy adventurers were on board with him, and while the shore of the lake recedes from their sight, mass was said and the Te Deum sung. Crude indeed must have been this hastily constructed craft as compared with the beautiful steamers that now ply those same waters. Laboriously and slowly they moved along, and late in the fall of that year the entrance of the bay was made. They did not go further than the Pottawatomie islands. What they saw and what they thought we know but little of, but we can well imagine the courage that must have been theirs, simply for the love of adventure and the reputation for discovery in exploration, thus to have entered the wilds of an unknown country, peopled by a savage and barbarous race. Among the company were two who have become historic personages—Tonty and Hennepin. On reaching Green Bay, La Salle landed his men and unloaded his ship, and placing on board a cargo of furs, purchased from the Indians, he sent her on a return trip to Niagara."

"Providing himself with canoes, he loaded the outfit and his men into them, and commenced the descent of Lake Michigan, an undertaking that now one who would engage in would be called foolhardy in the extreme. Down its western shore they paddled, reached and doubled its southern extremity. At the mouth of the river St. Joseph they halted, and waited for the returning of the Griffin in vain, employing their time in the building of a fort. His men recuperated, La Salle once more, in the canoes, proceeded up the St. Joseph to a point near where South Bend, Ind., now stands. Lifting their canoes from the water and placing them on their backs, across the country they marched, tediously and patiently, until at length their spirits were cheered by the sight of flowing waters; and now, for the first time, the eyes of white men beheld the Kankakee. On its placid and clear waters their boats were once again launched, and all aboard. The first of December, 1679, found them gliding down the river on which we now live, and of which we feel so justly proud."

"The distance between the River St. Joseph and the Lake of the Kankakee, west of South Bend, at that time, was but two miles, and it is known that at one time, about 1832, a canal was dug from this lake to the river, through which sufficient water flowed to run a mill. Hennepin, in his memoirs, says of the ground between the river and the lake, that the ground was so marshy that it could scarcely hold the weight of a person walking upon it; that at the head of this lake was an Indian village, and on arriving at which they found the portage had been made without scarcely knowing it, as the country was all new and strange to the voyagers. They marked the trees as they passed along, to serve as a guide to those who should follow after them. 'They found here piles of bones of wild animals, and canoes of skins made by the Indians, with which to cross the river. Hennepin describes the land, of the head waters of the Kankakee as being so marshy that, had it not been for the frost that hardened the ground, there would have been great difficulty to land their canoes and find a suitable camping place. They wrote letters and tied them to the trees to give the followers of La Salle, whom they expected, information and instructions. It is supposed that while it is possibly true no white man ever preceded La Salle in the passing of this portage, yet it was perfectly well known to him to exist, as his whole expedition seems to have been planned with reference to it, and no chance brought him to the mouth of the St. Joseph, and thence down to South Bend."

"The Portage of the Kankakee is famous with historical reminiscences, and to the voyagers of subsequent years afford a choice of routes to the Wabash and to the Illinois country, as the route by the Tippecanoe to the one, and by the Chicago creel: to the other, in the dry season, necessitated long and tedious portages.

"Lingering in the Kankakee Valley, to enjoy its beauty, and the game and fish there so plentiful, it was January, 1680, when La Salle reached the lake of the Illinois river. He went no farther that year. Stopping long enough to build a fort, and garrisoning it, he returned by way of the river, to a point near where the Kankakee empties into the Illinois, where, probably, the river being impeded by ice, he left his canoes and traveled overland through what is now Will county, back to the fort on the St. Joseph. In his subsequent passages through the country, La Salle kept farther to the west, moving up and down the Desplaines river, and, with one exception, it is not until the Nineteenth century that we have any record that a white man ever saw this valley from the time La Salle last beheld it—nearly one hundred and fifty years—though it is quite probable that, of the many fur traders that filled the west at the beginning of this century, some must have been there."

"September 17, 1721, Father Charlevoix made the descent of the Kankakee, and gives a description of its source and surroundings, much the same as did Hennepin."

THE POTTAWATOMIES.

"There were found here by the first white settlers, as the owners of the soil, the Pottawatomies. They were the first great Algonquin family. In the early enumeration of the tribes by the Jesuits, the Ottawa are mentioned as speaking the pure Algonquin dialect. The Ottawas, Ojibewas, Algonquins and Pottawatomies, while speaking different languages, yet were so near allied that it has been said by Mr. Gallatin that they were rather dialects of the same language than as distinct languages. This opinion was arrived at by Mr. Gallatin after a scientific analysis of all of them, and confirmatory of this opinion, in the treaty at Chicago, in 1821, different chiefs of the Chippewas, Pottawatomies and Ottawa^s made the declaration that they were one and the same people and had been so regarded by the fathers of the tribes, and that a separation had taken place many years before at Michilimacinaq, of which there was a well authenticated tradition. There is good evidence that they were much alike, in dress, customs and manners. In 1680 they had not yet come to the Kankakee country, but dwelt on the islands at the entrance of Green Bay, and La Salle found none of them here. The Jesuit relations mention them as early as 1639 and 1640, as dwelling to the north of Huron lake, and later as being farther down on the coast of Lake Michigan. Their characteristics at that time were great hunters and fishers and of warlike bearing; possessing a country adapted to the raising of Indian corn, of which they cultivated a great deal; idolaters of the strongest type, with many foolish stories; polygamous, yet revering their wives and daughters more than the other nations about them; and to the French the firmest of friends; hospitable to strangers in such a degree as to make them an exception."

"In 1721, Charlevoix says that they had but a foothold left at Green Bay, but had villages on the St. Joseph and at Detroit, whither they had come and located, it is presumed from the most authentic data, about twenty years previously. Their polygamous habits soon multiplied their tribe, until; spreading southerly and westerly, they occupied about all Northwestern Indiana and Northern Illinois, and were in undisputed possession here at the earliest settlement. The women did all of the work, and cultivated corn and such vegetables as beans, peas, melons and the like. The men spent their time in hunting and fishing. Both sexes displayed great taste in dress and ornamentation, both in the painting of their persons and the decoration of their robes, using a great deal of vermilion. They did not separate into different tribes, as did other nations, but remained one great family."

"They remained the faithful allies of the French until their overthrow by the English, in 1712, resetting the French, at Detroit, from their besieging enemies. In the war of the Revolution they fought with the British army, although they had previously fought with Pontiac against the English, and their war parties raided settlements in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana. In the massacre of Chicago, in 1812, they were the principal actors; bands coming from the St. Joseph, Kankakee and Illinois countries, composed of the wildest,

ESSEX ETCHINGS - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, September 12, 1878.

The German camp meeting was largely attended: quite a goodly number embraced religion, and others who had grown cold and indifferent were set upon the solid rock. There were thirteen ministers in attendance. Bishop Yakel also favored us with his presence and delivered an able sermon on Sunday morning. There were 23 tents on the ground. The meeting closed on Wednesday morning, and those who had taken an active part went away feeling amply rewarded for all their trouble, and a unanimous vote was given for another camp meeting next fall.

Wm. H. Corkill, who went West last winter, and traveled through Kansas and a portion of Nebraska, is now numbered with the dead. He had bought a farm near Frith, Neb., and was making preparations for his folks, who contemplated going out next winter. Willie was in his 23d year and was highly respected by all his acquaintances, and his folks are sorely grieved at the loss of their son and brother. His disease was brain fever. His remains were interred in Nebraska.

PILOT PENCIL POINTS - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, September 12, 1878.

Mr. John Brazier who has been suffering from chills and fever, is able to be around, but unable to attend to his daily work as yet.

Mr. Wm. Stowits is suffering from asthma, which troubles him very much at this time of the year, commencing about the twentieth of August and lasting from four to six weeks.

Mr. John S. Brazier intends leaving on Tuesday for Paw Paw, Mich., where he will attend school the coming winter.

We learn that the laying out of town lots at the station is to begin today. John R. Griffin intends putting up the first building, which will be used for a blacksmith shop.

It is reported that the name of the new station is to be Herscherville. If so we are truly sorry, as many others. Let it be Pilot, or rather Pilot Centre, and we will be content.
