

With the advent of good weather some of us may be planning to make a genealogical field trip to visit the area where our ancestors were located and/or to distant known living relatives. Of course, there is never enough time, on such a trip, to do all the things we want to do. So as good genealogists, and according to the "Book," we plan and list just what we are going to do, what we are going to look for, which records we are going to search, etc. Then when we get there, because our time is limited, we are inclined to hew rigidly to our plan so that we do not waste a minute of our valuable time. But let us remember and provide time and opportunity for chance contacts with people living in the area. It is these kind of contacts which are likely to provide information which is not recorded anywhere, to reduce our search time or area, and tie cold bare courthouse records together.

Last month while on such a trip, eating at a counter in a restaurant about 40 miles from the research area, a man obviously on his way to work, took a stool next to mine. While waiting to be served and eating, I introduced myself and told him what I was doing. He told me that he owned a small farm about 40 miles west of there. It developed that his father had donated the ground for the Glubb Creek Church and Cemetery, where I had been searching the day before, and he was able to give me additional family information and sources for subsequent searching.

After going back for the second time, in two years, to search a private cemetery with negative results, a casual, off hand, stop at a rural farm house to inquire if they knew who had the burial records, which from the appearance of the cemetery would have seemed to have been non-existent, I was told (a) there are no Virgins buried there, (b) there are no Virgins buried in the next cemetery that you plan to search, but (c) if you go back up the road about three miles and stop at Mr. Dennis' house he can help you. In doing so I found out that Mrs. Dennis was a first cousin to the wife of Samuel Virgin, who was a first cousin to my grandfather and they pointed out for me where the Virgin's Burial Ground was. It is not recorded in courthouse records, is not shown on any maps (which I've been able to find,) is in the middle of a cultivated field with no road leading to it and could not be identified from the nearest road as a cemetery. Of course, they gave me other family information, which confirmed and tied the courthouse records together.

So on such a trip let us not be too busy or occupied with our planned activities, to talk and let others know what we are therefor and what we are doing.

Edward D. Virgin

KANKAKEE VALLEY GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY CREST

The idea of the crest on the front cover was born at one of our monthly meetings. The workmanship was that of Mr. Carmain, of Bradley, Illinois, who used one of his sign painting pens to put the idea on paper.

The crossed "trade axe" and "peace pipe" above the shield indicates the war and treaties that took place in the Kankakee River Valley area from the time the first white settler arrived, until the last of the Indian land was sold.

The "white cross" through the center of the shield is for the christian missionaries who first traveled among the Indians and told of the "beautiful land" on their return to civilization.

The remaining four emblems within the shield are for the four major nationalities that settled the area. Starting at the upper right is the "Fleur-de-lis" for the French and French-Canadiens, beneath that is a double headed eagle which appeared on many early German flags, to the left of the eagle is a shamrock for the Irish (although the Harp of Tara is the national emblem of Ireland we thought a shamrock is a better known Irish emblem), and above the shamrock is the "Cross of St. George" which is part of the flag of England and symbolic of our English settlers.

The name THE-A-KI-KI is one of at least 17 different spellings of what many say the City of Kankakee received its name. The meanings of these 17 variations range from "swampy place", "wolf", "wonderful land" to "beautiful land." We, as do many others, prefer the "beautiful land" meaning.

THE LAST ENCAMPMENT OF THE INDIANS

The Hon. Clark BROWN, of Union, Missouri, a member of the Missouri legislature, formerly a resident of Momence, has shown his deep interest and appreciation of the work undertaken by the writer to preserve that which is worth while in the lives of the early day settlers, by furnishing us the following incident.

"The greatest return of the children of the prairies to a last view of their old hunting grounds, was when the report came, in the summer of 1853, that a tribe of Indians had come back and encamped in Bourbonnais Grove.

Quite a company from our neighborhood, east of the grove, decided to go down and see the Indians. Some went in buggies, and some on horseback, and the seeing was well worth the going. On a platform of light poles two feet above the ground in an open spot in LeVasseur's sugar grove, the old chief and his squaw were squatted amid their blankets and other belongings. I remember that "Injun" as the largest squab of human flesh and fat I ever saw. His weight must have been four hundred pounds or more. We saw no efforts upon his part to stand on his feet that day. His clothing consisted of one garment, a large sheet of canvas, seemingly, which buttoned about his neck, enveloping him in its ample folds. It might have been considered the original of the "Mother Hubbard".

The old couple seemed to take much pride in each other, she taking pains with the little rat-tail braids with a few strands of white hair mixed with his black hair that hung from the eaves of his formidable head. Both chattered or grunted freely with the company which paid them the most attention during the day. The rest of the thrity or forty members of the tribe were in dteepes, or brush wigwams, arranged in a circle at some distance from their chief. But little shelter was required in a summer encampment.

Their toilet was lacking altogether in style. All efforts at clothing were a conglomerate mixture--no two alike--of white man's and aboriginal dress. One article, the blanket prevailed quite generally with the women. But there was a variety of styles when it came to wearing them. With some the blanket would be suspended from the loins, while others spread it over their shoulders. The split skirt had not then come into style, and their blankets were not sufficiently ample in dimensions to permit much of a "split."

Apparently the girls as they approached the stage of womanhood, had their hair plaited into one long braid, and with man, this braid was, at regular intervals of several inches, pounded full of mud or moist clay which dried and stayed hard. This not only held the hair in place, but was an aid to ornamentation, feathers and beads being lavishly used. One thing that spoke well for the tribe, there were no evidences of cross-breeding. All had the same degree of of smoked bacon" complexion, the same coarse, black hair.

Not many of the tribe, between the old chief and the children and youths with their bows and arrows with which they shot the big copper pennies from a split stick set in the ground, seemed desirous of cultivating the acquaintance of the visitors. No doubt they all could make use of our language if they had so desired, but they seemed not inclined to discuss the latest fashions nor disposed to relate the neighborhood gossip, even if such things are the admitted prerogative of the "female of the species."

There were other echoes also from the west side of the great river. Momence, like a few others, had selected a reservation, and seemingly with very good judgment. Momence, it should be borne in mind, was an Indian Cheif. We might say it consisted of a piece of the Kankakee River embracing the island, on which was once a grist mill, and quite an extent of shore on either side of the river. By this time, no doubt the site is occupied by the city of Momence. The writer once had the pleasure of an interview during a railroad ride with the original proprietor. He was a large, well proportioned Indian, dressed in white man's fashion. This was his last visit to his old range on the Kankakee. Probably, Indian-like, he had been accused of selling his reservation to two parties. We never heard how the courts decided the ownership."

MOMENCE INCORPORATES

Momence took steps to incorporate as a village nearly three-quarters of a century ago. At that time the little settlement of the river had near unto two hundred souls, five or six stores and several small industries. The truth is, Momence was a smug, tight little border settlement of substance while Kankakee was still an infant in swaddling clothes, "mewling and spewing in its nurse's arms." There are no records extant relating to this momentous event, sad to say. The memory of the old-time pioneer holds all there is to be said about it. It is generally conceded that the effort to incorporate took place about the year 1853, some time after the election held to locate the county-seat of the newly organized county of Kankakee, the disastrous outcome of which, disappointing to the hopes and ambitions of Momence, has been set forth in a previous volume of stories of early days. Momence as a "border town" retained her chief characteristics in this respects for many a year. Her people, originally, were the real, dyed-in-the-wool frontier type, and were restless and sensitive to a degree of restraints imposed by law or the customs of civilization. These old-town men, were positive giants! Scarcely a man of them measured less than six feet, and many of them were taller than that! Natually they were possessed of a grit and a brawn that made them formidable in case of personal encounter.

The life of the old town of the border was one of the inter-necine strife in a day when a mere difference of opinion, if nothing more, sufficed to start hostilities. Bill Graham and Dan Parmlee, two backwoods giants fell out one day and in the fight that ensued, Graham seized a neck-yoke that chanced to be lying close by and hearily brained his adversary with it. That old Dan lived at all, after this savage on-slaughter, was one of the wonders. But frontier skulls were made to stand hard knocks. For months afterwards, when Parmlee came to town, it was noticed that he did not bring his rifle with him. It seemed strange for the two were inseparable, ordinarily. Asked one day about it and why he did not carry it as of yore, old Dan replied in his characteristic way: "Wal, its like this; if I had that har rifle with me and happened to run across Bill GRAHAM at the same time, by God I'd kill 'im! Yes I would--sure as Adam and Eve lived in the Garden of Eden. Me and Bill used to be purty good friends, and he ain't such a bad feller anyway. Mebbe if I'd got hold of that neck-yoke fust--well, anyway I leave the old rifle home so's old Dan won't do anything hasty, besides, old Dan's purty good yit, if wust comes to wust!"

It was always a sport-loving community, this little, backwoods settlement of the Kankakee, whose people, of the stature and endowed with the brawn of giants, instead of being occupied with the more serious things of life, leaned rather to the sports and games and trifling things which made up, in large part, the life of wilderness days. Envy and avarice had not laid hold of the hearts and consciences of these people in that day. It was a generation born to the corn-pone and the hickory shirt, in which no element of superiority of race or breeding was acknowledged except the superiority of physical force. The "best man" in every community held his head high. He had a right to, for his quality had been subjected to the acid test of many and many a battle. The marshman and the woodsman, and the men of the river and the prairies all loved to congregate at Momence, for there their fun-loving natures always found that which was a joy to the soul.

Every other man, in that day, had a "race-hoss," and over on the western edge of town, just opposite the present city limits, was the track over which they ran. Here, in the heat of excitement, a man often bet everything he had in the world, even to the buckskin shirt on his back or the more treasured "spring seat," that later graced the lumberwagon and bespoke a prosperity quite in advance of the generality of frontier folk. After the "hoss-race" there would be foot-races, a wrestling match, a boxing bout or two, a cock-fight--anything--even a dog fight. And, at the bare mention of dogs, the pioneer memory recalls that, on one memorable occasion, two perfectly staid and well-behaved hounds of the "lop-eared" species, followed their respective masters to the festivities held in old Momence and, becoming imbued with the spirit and enthusiasm of the times, lit into one another in a regular rough-and-tumble fight. The crowd was interested and bet literally on the outcome of the fight. All might have been well and the 'finger that writes,' might have remained inert and motionless had not one of the men whose dog was getting somewhat the worst of the battle, kicked the opposing dog heavily in the jowl. As a result of this impulsive, ill-considered act, there ensued a fight instantly between the respective owners of the dogs, and, if the pioneer memory may be relied upon, "it was a scrap worth going miles to see."

NOT only that; for a time there was imminent danger that the whole masculine population was going to become involved, for each man had his friends and the spirit of fair-play and partisan rivalry ruled a formidable factor in the affairs of men of the border. The frontiersman who thus so whole-heartedly upheld the rights and reputation of his dog was about six feet four in his stockings. After severely chastising his adversary, he pused his way into the backwoods saloon followed by an admiring flock of partisans and, as he leaned upon the bar, he murmured to the bartender "Gimme a drink! It tires me to fight!"

That which we have related in the foregoing is necessary if one is to understand and fully appreciate the spirit and temper of a people who, confronted by a proposition to incorporate as a village, found themselves unable to agree, with any sort of unanimity, as to the benefits of such incorporation. Most of them felt that it meant a surrender of individual rights such as they had enjoyed in the past, a curtailing of the old, wide-open, free-and-easy life which was so greatly enjoyed when the habitues of the river and woods and prairies took a day off. "Give me liberty, or give me death," is a slogan which first had its inception in the hearts and minds of just such men as these. We are told that the first fight over the proposition to incorporate took place in 1853, and that it was a fight sure enough. There were hatreds engendered at that time that lived and smouldered and flared forth now and then for many and many a year, After the lapse of nearly seventy-five years the high-lights and salient points of this particular picture of border days have faded into nothingness. The fight was a bitter one, it is true, but one can scarcely get head or tail of it. In some quarters it is said that it was a conflict of "the new comers" against the old-times," a conflict of "new ideas" against "fold," an arraying of the growing church element against these primitive types of the border, in order to control them, if only in a small way, and restrain the wild and hilarious spirit that so readily manifested itself whenever they met. Elder BURR, the circuit rider, was prominently identified as a leader of the forces for incorporation. He was threatened, secretly and openly, by the more headstrong of the opposing side. But he went his way, calm, imperturbable, temperate of manner in his support of the incorporation project, yet firm and unyielding as a rock in his purpose.

As a result of this early-day battle of the ballots in old Momence, the proposition to incorporate won by a small vote, surprising as it may seem. There were hatreds and personal dislikes and jealousies that registered in this first election. The result was hardly a genuine reflex of the real, underlying sentiment in the minds of the voters. They had it "got eve" with someone, that's all. Momence set out uncertainly upon the new municipal life called for by ordinances and state laws. The very first levying of a corporation tax occasioned a roar of protest on the part of both the "fors" and "againsts." With the issuance of the decree of poll-tax" on every male head of voting age within the corporation, there came positive rebellion. They would not pay three dollars, neither would they work in lieu of not paying, upon the streets of the village. On this they were united--unanimous--for once in their lives. Our friends who had supported so whole-heartedly this move towards civilization were so unruly, as boisterous and rantankerous as a two-year old Texas steer when he first feels the rope tighten on his neck. The newly elected officers, swelled with a proper sense of their importance and the dignity of office, on finding their orders disregarded by the populace, proceeded to make an example of some of the more prominent of the objectors and in effect, undertook to "hog-tie" and "brand" them as undesirable citizens. The majesty of the newborn authority of statutes and ordinances was invoked and the recalcitrants were properly sued and properly found guilty of a disregard for the mandates of the law as administered by its officers.

Though they were found guilty they would not pay, and the remaining alternative, that of working, they spurned as something beneath the consideration of freeman. By this act they added to the sum total of their delinquencies that of lese-majeste, which is most serious indeed, except in cases where frontiersman are concerned. The municipality, at that time, had not achieved financial prosperity sufficient to enable it to have a calaboose, and the village marshal would have as quickly considered suicide as he would an order to arrest and incarcerate these border men who resented corporate encroachment on their personal liberties. In the end, several of these cases were appealed to higher courts, and there, apparently, the matter dropped. Under which discouraging circumstances was organized law ushered into the old river settlement of Momence. This substitution of the new order for the old lived but a day, and then slowly faded away completely, so that for several years following this attempt at incorporation, the place knew no other law but that of the border--force. It was not until the late fifties that incorporation became a recognized fact, and round about 1860, when the trustess put into effect, an ordinance restraining the cows of the villagers from running at large, it was then that citizen Peter TERRILL was moved to observed to justice M. O. CLARK: "It do beat all there's always more damn fools than smart men.

This concludes the Delinquent Tax List for Kankakee County, 1883.

We axe indebted to our gentlemanly and obliging County Clerk, W. F. KENAGA, (upon whom we frequently "draw at sight" for items with which to supply our local columns,) for the number of marriage licenses issued by him during the year 1867, in monthly installments, as follows:

January	26	July	18
February	34	August	18
Plarch	20	September	35
April	21	October	29
May	12	November	20
June	14	December	24
Total	271

DEATHS

The funeral of James PEASGOOD, who died suddenly last week, at his residence a short distance in the country south of this city, was held at the First Presbyterian Church, on Thursday last, the service being conducted by Rev. H. B. THAYER. The burial took place under the attendance and direction of the Odd Fellow fraternity of Kankakee, who tenderly and solemnly bore their brother to the grave, from which, we trust, he will at last arise to take his place in the Grand Lodge above.

We regret to learn that Isaac Newton KENAGA, of the well-known KENAGA Bros. of this city, who has been ill with consumption during a year or so past, died on Tuesday afternoon last at the residence of his brother, S. C. KENAGA, Esq.. Obituary notice next week. Funeral services will be held at the new M. E. Church this (Thursday) afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.
